STDC Climate Action Webinar Series

What you and your community can do about climate change - in practical ways!!

Climate change is the biggest threat that the earth and its inhabitants has faced.

It will affect all aspects of human existence and make life more dangerous, less comfortable and more uncertain for us all.

But things can be done to lessen the impacts and their effects. These are called climate actions.

Everyone must take action on climate and communities will be a vital part of the climate action toolkit.

Find out what you, your family and your community can do reasonably and practically

These webinars have been organised by the South Tipperary Development Company and will be delivered by experts in each area. These will come from or be organised by TUS, Cabragh Wetlands and Community Engagement Partners.

This summer has shown the impact of Climate Change in Europe, and across the world. Research evidence shows that we in Ireland are generally aware of the global climate crisis, acknowledge its importance and want to play our part.

However, many of us are not sure what to do, how to deal with conflicting information and the best decisions to make for the future of ourselves and our communities.

This series of webinars will explain the basics of climate change and more importantly, will examine what you, your family and your community can do in practice across a range of areas. The programme will also include a few field trips to look at successful community projects in action

The series is designed for anyone interested in learning more about climate change and separating the facts and the fallacies. It will particularly suit people who are involved in community organisations such as Tidy Towns, Environmental Groups, Community Councils, Schools, Parishes etc.

A Certificate of attendance from TUS is available to those who attend 75% of the webinars

Attendance at the webinars is FREE but please register by clicking <https://ClimateWebinar.eventbrite.com>
